

Job description: Our medical interpreters assist Spanish-speaking patients during their telehealth medical appointments by communicating their statements to the provider through consecutive interpretation. Due to the pandemic, interpretation will be done remotely (via telephone). Interpreters should be available during their time slot, but also aware that this is an on-call position. Interpreters may get calls during their slot or may not be contacted – depending on the clinic’s needs. Interpreters should be dedicated individuals with strong work ethic, willingness to abide by all confidentiality guidelines and agree to complete the required training (a fluency check and a series of shadowing sessions).

Language proficiency: Fluency in English and Spanish with a strong grasp on medical terminology in both languages is required.
